COURSE OVERVIEW

With the draft Green Banking Guidelines being issued by the State Bank of Pakistan, it is only a matter of time that sustainability reporting will increase by banks and financial institutions. So as to disclose information regarding sustainable development, it is expected that banks will keep all of their stakeholders informed about their sustainability activities through communication in the form of ESG (Environmental, Social and Governance) reports or Sustainability Reports carried out at regular intervals.

Global Reporting Initiative (GRI) standards are an internationally accepted reporting standard that provides the most comprehensive framework for sustainability reporting. Reports prepared in accordance with international standardized reporting methods like GRI can be audited and verified by third parties.

This course aims to increase participants' understanding of the sustainability context, and the role and value of sustainability reporting, and help them take the first step towards reporting using the GRI Sustainability Reporting Standards.
